LOCATION

The modern year-round resort of Swissôtel Sochi, Gorky-Gorod is being built on the territory of Gornaya Karusel mountain resort in Krasnaya Polyana which occupies 863ha at 540m to 2200m above sea level. Gorky-Gorod comprises two ski villages, one at 540m and one at 960m. During the Olympics, Gorky-Gorod will host a mountain Olympic media village and media centre for over 4000 international journalists. The future Swissôtel will be located on the central square of the upper village, right along the shopping street and only a few metres away from the most important skiing facilities.

Guests will reach Gorky-Gorod via Sochi International Airport, which is a two-hour flight from Moscow and a three-hour flight from Vienna. The Resort will soon be connected from Sochi International Airport by a 30-minute fast train ride to Krasnaya Polyana. By 2014, Gorky-Gorod will become the centre of the mountain resort in Krasnaya Polyana capable to host up to 50'000 guests every day and to accommodate about 12'000 people at the same time.

Sochi with its territory of about 3400km is located on the eastern coast of the Black Sea in the southern Russian province of Krasnodar Krai region and attracts about 4 million holidaymakers a year from Russia and increasingly also from abroad. The warm climate and the scenic views over the snow-capped Caucasus mountains are the key attractions of the holiday resort, which is popular with prominent public figures. As there is snow in Krasnaya Polyana well into June, combining a beach holiday with the occasional skiing trip is easy. Krasnaya Polyana will be the venue for all outdoor events at the 2014 Winter Olympics, while all the indoor events will take place in Sochi city.
